Kraft To Conduct Hearings on Public Health Measures

Also Has Itinerary To Inspect The State Institutions

Assemblyman Fred H. Kraft, who with his wife returned home to Ocean Beach from the state legislature at Sacramento Monday, will be one of the busiest of all the solons during the recess. The short session adjourned Saturday night at 10:30 and the long session will start March 5, reports Kraft.

Commenting on the short session Thursday he told The News that "it was a lot of hard work. We were handicapped by lack of secretarial and stenographic help. The session, one of the shortest in California's history, was very harmonious as well as prolific of bills. Around 3300 were introduced by both houses, of which 2132 were in the assembly. A lot of them are minor amendments to the present code.

"Probably the most controversial and the most widely discussed were the six new bills having to do with public health, led by the governor's compulsory health insurance bill. As chairman of the committee before which these bills come, I have arranged public hearings at which to sound out public opinion on these measures, the first to be in San Diego Feb. 13. Other hearings will be held at Los Anyeles, Fresno, Watsonville, Sacramento and San Francisco.

"Tax bills also are going to highlight this coming session. I am asking the people of my district, the 78th, to let me know how they feel about this proposed tax program. Should the war time tax reductions be continued or should we go back to the 1942 tax rates and thereby be able to build up a reserve of state funds for post-war rehabilitation? I favor earmarking 100 millions to that post-war fund for re-allocation to the cities and counties, and the lessening of the tax burden on real property."

As chairman of a sub-committee on the Assembly ways and means committee, Kraft also will visit, during the recess, various state institutions, starting with those at Camarillo on Feb. 19. These visits will be to check budyet requests of the institutions for the ensuing biennium.

Waste Paper To Be Collected Here On February 5

Responding to the government's appeal for more paper, 2100 Camp Fire girls and Bluebirds will "enlist" in the U. S. Victory waste paper drive, and will start ringing doorbells this Thursday.

B. W. Bonham, president of the San Diego council of Camp Fire Girls, announced today that plans have been completed to "strive for a goal of a thousand tons during the next three months." "We are aware that waste paper is the nation's No. 1 most critical item, and we would be remiss in our obligations as defenders of the home front, if we did not actively try to help increase paper production," he said.

The girls will collect the paper, and the trucks of the war salvage committee will pick it up in lots of a ton or more. All proceeds will go to improve the organization's two camps, Camp Loligro, in Balboa Park, and Camp Walahi, at Cuymaca fountains.

All householders interested in participating in this important war offort are urged to have their bundled paper on the front curbs. Phone number for the Salvage headquarters is Main 9070. The collection will be made in Ocean Beach, zone 7, on Monday, Feb. 5.

Pointers Drop Two Games Past Week By Small Margins

Point Loma high school lost two basketball games by narrow margins during the past weekend. Both were outside the Victory league schedule, however. Hoover and Grossmont are tied for the league lead, each having won three games and lost none. The Pointers lost to St. Augustine in an over-time affair, 16 to 14, Friday afternoon. Timmons, with 9 points, was high for the game.

The other game was with the State College Bees, which the Pointers lost by one point, the score being 23 to 22. Timmons, with 9 points, also was high scorer in this game

In both games, the Pointers used the same lineup. The forwards were Hamlin and Stone, center Timmons and guards Medina and Silva.

In Victory league games played Friday, San Diego High beat Sweetwater 17 to 15, Grossmont won from Kearney 38 to 14 and Coronado from Vocational 39 to 26.

Pointers To Play Kearny

The Pointers take on Kerny at Linda Vista tonight and Coronado there on Tuesday evening.

Ocean Beach Unit To Join In Fourth USO Anniversary

Ocean Beach USO will join with similar units in the San Diego area Sunday in observance of the fourth anniversary of the national organization that is so effectively meeting the recreational and social needs of men and women in the armed forces.

Lloyd D. Greeson, chairman of the Ocean Beach USO Citizens committee, and a member of the USO Council executive committee, said Ocean Beach residents, in common with Americans generally, have a greater appreciation than ever of the services made available to those in uniform, and continued:

"Always looking ahead, the USO here and elsewhere is gearing its services to the needs of returning servicemen, wounded or well, who are depending upon the USO in their off-duty hours, just as they did before going abroad. Other changes including provision for the higher proportion of women in service, more personal work with service men's wives, and meeting changing conditions in war production centers such as the San Diego couty area.

"Ending of hostilities aywhere will bring increased calls for USO camp shows, while during the immediate future and early post-war period USO services will be adjusted continually, especially for ambulatory hospital personnel, men awaiting reclassification and resassignment, and others who will continue to visit USO clubs.

"Some idea of the growth of the USO will be gained from the fact that the original plan, back in 1941, called for about 340 clubs. The number of USO operations today is nearly 3000."

Captain of Local Fire Station Gets Transfer To City

Capt. R. M. Hamilton of the Ocean Beach fire station on Newport Ave. was transferred Tuesday to duty at the fire station in town located at Goldfinch and Washington Sts. Mission Bay C Of C Reelects Carl Schroder At Head

Schroder Candidacy For City Council Endorsed

Mission Bay Chamber of Commerce, at a called meeting held at Red's Cafe on Voltaire St. Monday night, elected officers for the ensuing year. With George Breidford of Mission Beach in the chair, the group reelected Carl Schroder of Ocean Beach, who took the lead in the founding of this civic group about a year ago, as president for another year. Other officers chosen were Ed Kickham of Mission Beach vice president, Raoul Appel of the Voltaire Pharmacy as treasurer and Mrs. Albert Munchiando of Ocean Beach as secretary.

Principal discussion before the group was the candidacy of Schroder for councilman in the first district. Chairman Breidford called for remarks from practically all of those present, and the sentiment expressed was heartily in favor of Schroder's candidacy.

Guest speaker was Harrison Mason, publisher of the San Diego Examiner of East San Diego. Mason declared that the coming city election was the most important in the history of the city. The four councilmen to be elected, for one thing, will have the power to name the city manager, he said. The Mission Bay area is coming to be one of the most vital sections in San Diego as regards to the city's future. He said Schroder is intimately familiar with the problems and needs of this area. "Am sure you can do no better than to promote him to the city council," he said. He predicted that the coming campaign would be hotly contested.

Ed Kickham, who at one time had been a candidate for the city council, also spoke enthusiastically in favor of Schroder. Regarding Councilman Crary, he said he was afraid "that Crary would resign if elected" and intimated that the Beach communities could not then hope for the support that they would get from Schroder should the latter win the election.

At conclusion of the discussion a resolution supporting Schroder's candidacy was offered and passed without a dissenting vote.

WOMEN OF CAPE MAY AVE. SECTION URGE REMOVAL OF BACKWATER DANGERS

Several women of the Cape May Ave. section of Ocean Beach urge action by the authorities to remove the dangers of the backwaters of the ocean at the foot of that avenue. In the pool there, Frank Tarpley, 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Tarpley, 2032 Abbott St., was drowned Jan. 25.

Reporting on the tragedy, Mrs. B. F. Delavan, 5158 Cape May Ave., a neighbor, said that she heard Mrs. Tarpley screaming for help and notified the local police and firemen. Before their arrival, her son, Fred, pulled the little lad out of the water and gave him first aid. Mrs. Tarpley had found the boy floating on the water's surface.

"This pool of water, which formed since the breakwater rock wall was installed, constitutes a menace and should be eliminated before other children drown there," Mrs. Delavan and her neighbors told The News this week.

'Orchids' To Point Loma High Students Named Outstanding

To stimulate interest in the reading of bulletin boards at Pt. Loma high school, Lyra Lou Car-others, student-chairman, borrowed the much worn idea of "an orchid" to the outstanding student of the week. Chosen by faculty members, these students are the most outstanding in the department or class who have contributed to the school in general and to the department or class in detail. Lyra Lou has a framed section with a reproduction of an orchid at the side and next to it is placed the information of the student for the week. Thus far the following students have been selected for this honor: Anne Parrish, outstanding in history, chosen by Lucien Atherton; Myron Morrison, distinctive work in social studies, selected by George Banks; Louise Lowry, representing Spanish achievements, as indicated by James Blee; Yvonne Gerson, top honors in drama and public speaking, chosen by Jeweldean Brodie; Paula DeHaven, distinctive honors in art, selected by Willabee Brodie; Jean Lupton, outstanding work in home economics, according to Mary Brown.

Speaker Scores Distortion of U.S. In War Of 1898

Judge Tells Kiwanis Uncle Sam Is Not Imperialistic

Speaking to the Kiwanis club Tuesday evening from 17 years of experience in the Philippines helping in Uncle Sam's program of preparing the Filipinos for self government, Judge Jesse George of San Diego scored the critics of U. S. policy in carrying on the Spanish-American war and in freeing the Philippines from Spanish misrule. He referred particularly to the charge made by James Truslow Adams in his four-volume history, the "March of Democracy," that Uncle Sam was imbued by a spirit of imperialism and was seeking to exploit Cuba and the Philippines.

"The author of those volumes gives a distorted idea of the Spanish-American war," he said. "A worse diluted history, I can hardly imagine. Adams' charges have been amply disproved by reliable historians."

The speaker also scored the lack of teaching of American history in the public schools and colleges of this country.

Judge George said he and President Osmena of the Philippine Islands are good friends and that Osmena has given assurance that he trusts the Americans to do the right thigh by the Filipinos While in the Philippines, where he first served a period of enlistment with the American army, George was under General Mac Arthur, the father of the present commander of the U. S. armies in the Islands.

Guests at the meeting included James McKinney of the San Diego club, Dr. Joseph Mc Sparran, guest of Dr. John Wilhoit; George J. Cinq-Mars, guest of Dan Smith; and Bert Skinner and Larry Dickey, Boy Scout guests of Martin Murphy.

Mr. Murphy will be program chairman next week and will put on a Boy Scout program with Harvey Atherton as the speaker and a large group of Boy Scouts as special guests.

Dana Enrollment Reaches Peak Of 914 This Week

Add 2 New Teachers At Start Second Semester

A check of enrollment at the beginning of the spring semester indicated that a total of 914 students had been reached at Dana Junior high school. Two new names appear on the faculty list, Mrs. Irma Whitehead, who replaces Mrs. Lola Melton as a teacher of special classes and English and Mrs. Marion Ausness, who has been assigned classes in science, social studies and Girls' physical Education. Mrs. Whitehead has been employed in Child Care Service and Mrs. Ausness was transferred from San Diego high school.

Classes have been adjusted to take care of the increase in enrollment and the building is filled to capacity, reports Principal Clarence Swenson. Final changes and refinements are being made in the plans for the new addition and its furniture and equipment and will soon be submitted to contractors for bids. If it is possible to start the new wing before March 1, it will be completed in time for the opening of school in September.

The annual intramural boys' basketball tournament is on this week and the championship team of the school will be determined by Friday. See next week's issue of The News for details.

Andy Tosh To Get New Service Station

Andy Tosh announced this week that all plans and specifications have been drawn and other preparations made for the rebuilding of his service station at the corner of Voltaire and Abbott, and that the owner, Jean Rittenhouse, expects to begin construction at once. The necessary priorities were readily obtained, a service station being classed as an essential industry. "We had splendid cooperation from the government in the matter,' Tosh said this week. He hopes the station will be ready for operation by Feb. 20.

A stucco building 24 feet long by 12 feet wide and ranging from eight to nine feet in height is planned, with a fire wall 18 inches higher than the roof all around. The trim will be in orange and green, he said. Louis Steinberg has been employed as carpenter. Midwinter Collections Arouse Yearning for a New Fur Coat

THIS fall and winter season stands forth on the fashion calendar as marking the dawn of a new era of superbly styled, luxurious looking fur coats that set a new high in point of elegance and artful design. After seeing the eye-thrilling midwinter displays, so resplendent and so "different" in style technique, any idea of making a last year's coat "do this winter" becomes in the mind of the woman who aspires to keep pace with fashion quite an unworkable theory. Perhaps "what to do with that Christmas check" might find an answer here.

The woman buying the fur coat of her dreams now, will reap rich reward, for the midwinter showings are presenting fur artistry at its peak. They stage a veritable revelation of models that interpret all the latest fashion gestures in way of wide versatility in the furs themselves, plus a new elegance in styling that outmodes anything that has been seen in recent years. Fur coats in current displays tell you the story of new shorter lengths, and of voluptuous large sleeves, most of them with dramatic wide cuffs, and of a new generous silhouette that achieves a flare and a pert back swing. These details sum up to that feeling of new elegance which pervades the entire fashion realm this winter.

It adds intrigue too, that such an amazing variety of furs are "in style" these days. It is as fashion-right to wear a super Persian lamb coat as it is to wear an American or Russian broadtail. As for mink, it has come into its own in a big way. The sensation is wild mink, a very soft and youthful looking fur that is being made up into stunning coats, capes and handsome capestoles. Seal, black or brown, is given high fashion rank, also nutria, beaver, caracul gray or brown, and many sports furs, particularly the spotted types. As to the supremacy of lovely white ermine in the evening mode, there is no question.

There is such a diversity of fur coat types one can find just the style one likes best. The emphasis this year is on tuxedo fashions that range from the new short lengths to full length. Cossack coats offer a dramatic new silhouette and there is also increasing favor for the short nipped-in-at-waist tunic modes. Fur capes short or long make big news. They are especially smart in mink or Persian lamb.

The coats pictured herewith, selected for illustration from among smart fur modes created by Chicago Fashion industries, carry the message of that new elegance which is so characteristic of fashions of today. The handsome full-length nutria tuxedo coat shown above to the right stands for rich flattery and long dependable wear. It is a forthright example of fur coat perfection, styled in the new luxurious mood. Yet it is practical and of sterling worth. It has the new deep turnback cuffs and a chic matching hat.

To the right below is a black Persian lamb top-favorite. It is a thoroughbred in every detail, so elegantly conservative it can be worn with equal aplomb over street or over evening clothes. The deep slit at each side is a new-this-season fashion gesture. Take note also of the handsomely cuffed sleeves.

Gray furs are very much in the fashion picture this year. Shown to the left above is a striking fitted Cossack coat, styled of gray Persian lamb. Whopping big sleeves and saucy pockets are intriguing style accents. It is stunning types like this that declare a new era in fur styling.

The coat shown in lower left corner is interesting in that it is styled of lynx-dyed fox, giving emphasis to the fact that the list of furs on this winter's fashion program covers an unusually wide range.

Another negro went into a Baptist revival while the preacher was calling for converts and he saw a strange negro on the back seat and said to him: 'Brother, don't you want to have your soul cleaned white as snow?' 'I'se had my soul cleaned white as snow.' 'Where?' asked the preacher, and he said at de Methodist church. 'No. you hasn't,' said the preacher. 'You just had it dry-leaned.'

GOD IS MY CO-PILOT

By COL. ROBERT L. SCOTT

WNU Features.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I: Scott's early experiences with gliders and airplanes. He goes to Ft. McPherson and enlists in the regular army as a private CHAPTER II: Scott wins the West Point competitive exam and gets a furlough before reporting. He is graduated as a second lieutenant of infantry and goes to Europe, which he tours on a motorcycle. He sells his motorcycle and arrives at Randolph Field, Texas.

CHAPTER III: Scott makes his first solo flight. Drives 1,300 miles to Georgia over every week-end to see his girl. Scott is now graduated from Kelly Field and has wings pinned on his chest. Ordered to report to Hawaii but wanting to get married he lays his plight before the General and is ordered to report at Mitchel Field, N. Y., instead.

CHAPTER IV: En route to New York Scott is stopped by police who mistake him for a bandit. He carries the mail for Uncle Sam in order to gain more flying time, and gets married.

CHAPTER V: The war edges closer and he is farther than ever from combat duty. He has been told he is too old for combat flying, and after December 7, 1941, he begins writing Generals all over the country for a chance to fly a fighter plane.

CHAPTER VI: Scott solos a Flying Fortress for the first time and makes twenty practice landings. He leaves for India from a Florida point.

Once again we had been frustrated in our effort to go to war on the offensive. Now, four months after Pearl Harbor, the stencilled word on a B-17 in our flight, SNAFU—meaning roughly, in Air Corps slang, "Snarled-up"—seemed to fit the situation. We learned the worst when Haynes came back from Delhi with a face a yard long. Sadly he told us the truth. Due to the fall of Bataan and the loss of other fields in eastern China—our secret bases—coupled with other factors beyond his control, our "dream mission" had come to the end of the line.

During the fourteen days in Karachi, when we had been waiting for Colonel Haynes, it had been a difficult job of finesse to hang on to the ships. All twelve of the B-17's were lined up to be turned over to Base Units on the field. But the personnel responsible for the conflicting orders had reckoned without the extreme loyalty of the volunteer crewmen to the flight commander and the pilot of each ship. The men stood guard twenty-four hours a day in and around the bombers. This was logical, too, because each ship contained not only the secret bomb-sight but full complements of loaded fifty-calibre guns, as well as the personal effects of the bomber crews. At first the crews appeared bewildered; but then their attitude seemed to imply stubbornly that they had been ordered to attack Japanese territory, and no matter if Bataan and all of eastern China fell, that's what they were going to do.

One day the General in charge of the Air Base sent a crew down to my ship with orders for them to take over and search out a Japanese Task Force far out in the Arabian Sea. They were met with the ready Tommy guns of my men and roughly told that no one except members of the crew could get aboard. A Major in the new crew showed his orders. My crew chief replied: "I'm sorry, Sir, but I have mine, too; we are on our way to bomb an enemy objective. No one gets aboard this ship except the regular crew."

CHAPTER VIII

Well, the Air Base General had to ask us to carry out the mission, and to ease the monotony we were glad to comply. Taking the bomb-bay tanks from the ship, we loaded with five-hundred-pound bombs and off we went, eight hundred miles into the Arabian Sea, looking for a Jap naval force composed of three warships, five destroyers, five cruisers, and two aircraft carriers—with our one bomber. Due to the low weather we had to fly beneath the cloud base at seven thousand feet. Reaching our patrol area, we searched until it was necessary to return to base for fuel. I have often wondered what we would have done had we had the fortune or misfortune to find that task force—if it existed. After all, from seven thousand feet we could have done very little damage with a single ship. Somehow I'm glad we did not engage the enemy—I always hated to be a clay pigeon, and though the future looked dark, there were interesting days ahead.

Slowly, though, through days in which some of the others took their ships to bomb Rangoon and the Andaman Islands, and finally when Haynes returned from Delhi, the realization sank in that our mission was cancelled. I have never seen thirteen crews of bombers carrying so many broken hearts. Morale dropped like a stone. On April 21, when the base took our ships, I think we would have been justified in getting stinking drunk.

New orders came for Colonel Haynes and most of us in the ill-fated "dream mission" to report to a remote base in eastern Assam, on the India-Burma border, to run the A. B. C. Ferrying Command. This Assam-Burma-China transport command was for the purpose of carrying supplies to China and Burma, to make up as much as possible for the fall of the Burma road.

When Colonel Haynes and I arrived in Assam we both considered ourselves "shanghaied." I could tell, as we faced each other across the breakfast table that first morning, that we both knew that things were going to be bad. Our status had changed from participating in what we considered the "greatest mission in the world," to the insignificant task of running a ferry command from India to Burma. Once again combat duty seemed far away.

All around us now were the tea gardens of Assam. Our landing field was an RAF base. Our homes were mud and bamboo huts called "bashas." Through the jungle that surrounded our base, wild animals roamed; every night we could hear the jackals scream. We knew that cobras were everywhere. On flights over the Brahmaputra River, I would see rhinos, elephants and other animals which made me realize vividly that we were far from civilization.

Our base was situated in a horseshoe formed by the Himalaya Mountains to the North and West and by the Naga Hills to the East and Southwest. The altitude of our field was 600 feet above sea level, and all around us in three directions rose mountains—the lower Himalayas being 25,500 feet, just 150 miles to the North. These great peaks reached their ceiling, of course, at Mt. Everest, 29,002 feet above sea level—the highest mountain in the world. This was 300 miles from us.

Our first job was to begin the construction of other fields in the area—this was to permit us to have more than one base from which to work. For our job was that of being ferry pilots for both the Chinese Army and General Chennault's AVG down in Burma. We were to carry high octane gas, ammunition, and food into Burma, and later into China. We were soon to find ourselves returning from Burma with our ships completely filled and overflowing with wounded British soldiers. Col. C. V. Haynes was boss; he was Commanding Officer of the A. B. C. Ferrying Command, and I was his Executive Officer.

We began our work the day after we arrived in Assam. This was April 21. We had thirteen transports manned by the Army and Pan-American pilots. Our job in flying supplies into Burma was a tough one with unarmed transports, for by this time the Japanese had crossed the Sittang and the Irrawaddy and had taken Rangoon. They now had columns moving towards Mandalay. Their Air Force was all over Central Burma, and the only thing that stood between them and the capture of all of Burma was the few American pilots of the First American Volunteer Group who had been forced now to base at Lashio. These were truly the dark days of Burma.

On April 24, Colonel Haynes and Colonel Cooper transported a load of ammunition and aviation fuel to Lashio for the Flying Tigers, and on their way back an enemy fighter plane made an attack on their transport. Recognizing the ship as an enemy Zero, Haynes and Cooper left the flying of the plane to the co-pilot and went back into the fuselage, to ward off the attack as best they could with Tommy Guns. Don Old, the co-pilot, dove the transport until they were actually skimming over the jungle trees. These evasive tactics kept the Jap ship from coming up under the vulnerable transport. Just one of the Jap tracers in that Douglas would have set it afire.

As the Jap dived towards them, Cooper and Haynes and their crew chief, Sergeant Bonner, fired magazine after magazine at the Jap. This either discouraged him or the enemy ship lost the transport in a turn, for they got away. But even considering the bravery of these flyers in using their meager armament against a fighter ship, it is a poor policy to shoot Zeros with Tommy guns; 45-caliber ammunition is not very effective against aircraft, but, as usual in a case like this, if you have only a pop-gun to point at the enemy, it helps the morale.

Most of our pilots had been chosen from the crews of the thirteen ships of our original mission. Even with the loss in morale they had suffered when the attack on Tokyo was called off, they were still the best transport pilots I had ever seen.

Colonel Haynes was a veteran big-ship pilot, and for the last ten years he had worked in four-engine bombers. The records that he had set with the giant B-15 will inspire the Air Force forever. Here was a big, cheerful master pilot who never asked another man to do a job he wouldn't do himself. We of the A. B. C. Ferrying Command looked upon him as the best, and Haynes will always stand out in my mind as one of the greatest officers of our army. This jovial veteran was ready to do anything to help win the war, but we all knew he preferred to kill Japs rather than rustle freight across to Burma. I lived with Colonel Haynes on one of the tea plantations in Assam, where we were billeted with a Scotsman, Josh Reynolds of Sealkotte Tea Estate.

Major Joplin, whom we called "Jop," was another of our pilots. This man claimed that he had been born in a DC-2 and weaned in a C-47. One of the Pan-American pilots had made a forced landing with one of the transports, putting it down with the wheels up in a rice paddy near the Brahmaputra. Jop took a crew to the transport, took the bent propellers off and roughly straightened them. With his crew and some volunteer natives, he dug holes under the folded-up landing-gear and then let the gear down until it was fully extended, with the wheels down, to the bottom of the holes. Now he placed heavy timbers from the wheels to the surface of the rice paddy, putting them in at a small angle to form an inclined plane. Next he had about a hundred natives pull on ropes that were tied to the wheels, and dragged the Douglas transport up the inclined plane until it rested on the more or less level ground of the rice paddy. Then Jop demonstrated that he could justify all his claims of having been born in a Douglas transport. He gave the ship the guns, and in a flurry of mud and water and rice stalks, bounced it from the field and flew it home to base.

Col. Meriam C. Cooper watches sky for return of U. S. planes.

All the pilots were good, and they were eager. The weather never became too bad or the trip too dangerous for men like Tex Carleton, Bob Sexton, or the others to get through. The enlisted men were the best. There in Assam they fought a constant battle against boredom, malaria, and every form of tropical disease. They ate and slept in the mud, and didn't grumble more than the average soldier gripes about the native food. The stringy buffalo meat was fairly tough; the mouthful used to get bigger and bigger as you chewed it.

We had 59 dozen cookies, three cakes and a box of cup cakes last week, and the hospital reports they had two parties and our baking was greatly enjoyed. They wish us to keep up the good work. At the Center we have fats and sugar and most always eggs. I hope more and more will help with this project.

Mrs. Louise Graham informs me that a class in home nursing starts Tuesday in the Point Loma high school home nursing room. These classes will be held Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 7 until 9. All who have not taken this course should do so. Mrs. Majaunto Hills, R. N., will be instructor. If you miss the classes this week, you can start next week. We have so few doctors and nurses that all who can should take advantage of this free Red Cross course.

Do you remember at Christmas time the "angles" that were made of tin, with little faces on them? The faces were clipped from magazines and cards and Camp and Hospital ask that you clip these pictures during the year as they want to make decorations for trees for next year. They also want all lengths of yarn for the Craft shops. No matter what colors or lengths please send them in. So many boys are weaving and making beautiful articles. Also will you women get out your rag bags and make up as many bags as possible about 6x6 inches with double draw strings at the top. These bags are badly needed. Miss Nye uses them for checkers, marbles for Chinese checkers and others. In shipping, the boxes are apt to break, and bags are much better. Many of these bags are used each week, so please get busy. There is a crying need for them.

Girl Scout troop 120, under Mrs. Hart, donated many cookies this week. These small girls do wonders. Mrs. Hart is to be congratulated.

Don't forget to go to the blood donor center and donate blood to save a life. Call F-7704 and make an appointment.

You who live around W. Point Loma Blvd. will find fats and sugar at the home of Mrs. Brewer, 4721 Voltaire St. Call B-6083. Bring in your tin can tops, spools, etc.

BOY SCOUT WEEK

There are few, if any, observances during the year in which the American people share more enthusically than in Boy Scout Week which runs from February 8 to 14. The Boy Scouts of America with their nearly 2,000,000 members are one of the most potent forces in the nation today in the fight against juvenile delinquency.

The training which our youths receive through this splendid organization turns their thoughts toward constructive lines and helps develop a sound moral foundation on which to build their lives.

In their war activities the work of the Scouts has been outstanding. J. A. Krug, WPB chairman, reports that 85,000 Scouts and Cubs each accounted for 1,000 pounds or more of waste paper during the paper drive in 1944.

Probably one of the greatest benefits which Scouting is achieving on behalf of humanity is the development of a genuine sense of tolerance among the rising generation. The spirit of fellowship which permeates their meetings and activities enables boys of all nationalities to work together in a unity where the artificial barriers of class, race and creed do not enter in.

In this, the Boy Scouts are truly building the "One World" which mankind is seeking. In this, they are helping to destroy the hatreds and misunderstandings from which arise the persecution and abuse of minorities.

For a great work done, and being done, America salutes her Boy Scouts.

"SPREADING THE WORK"

When the 77th Congress recognized that all small business concerns couldn't possibly be fitted into the war production pattern, and that many were due for extinction as the war progressed, the Smaller War Plants Corporation was organized to fill the gap and see that little business wasn't a complete casualty.

Today the record shows that due to SWPC efforts, plus the cooperation of the townsfolk in literally thousands of communities, many small plants which were the pre-war hubs of the towns they generated, have survived to handle sub-contracts for both war and civilian needs, and doubtless will continue to produce jobs as well as commodities after the war is done. "Spreading the work," the process is called, and it often operates as a cycle of give-and-take to keep things going.

An example is the current contract secured by the Smaller War Plants Corporation for rebuilding musical instruments for Navy use, by a small California concern that might otherwise be locked up for the duration.

If the Smaller War Plants Corporation procedure results in the rescue from extinction of an appreciable percentage of small business enterprises around which the normal community revolves, it will have earned the respect of all who wish to preserve the basic pattern of our democracy.

ACTION ON VETERAN LOANS

The long-awaited loan plan for World War II veterans under the "G. I. Bill of Rights" is finally in operation, at least for home loans. Regulations governing farm and business loans have not been issued yet by the Veterans' Administration in Washington, but they are expected before long.

With this lending plan now partially in action, the postwar period is here, in effect, right now for many discharged servicemen. Their plans for homes of their own need not wait until Germany and Japan are defeated.

Veterans should understand, however, that their military service does not automatically qualify them for this type of credit. The law requires banks and other lending companies to follow the same credit principles which apply in their regular business practises.

In other words the ex-serviceman must show that his income is sufficient to repay the full amount borrowed, including the "guaranteed" portion, according to the terms of the loan. And he cannot pay more than a "reasonable normal value" for the home he buys. The Veterans' Administration must give final approval on all loan applications.

County Tax Rate Reduced From Previous Year

Assessed Values And Population Show Increases

New Year's round-up of facts about San Diego county government shows the county tax rate for general purposes at $1.72 for 1944-45, compared with $1.77 per $100 of assessed value for 1943-44; assessed value of taxable property in the county of $302,854,269 for 1944-45, compared with $279,812,530 for last year; per capita valuation of $660 for this year, compared with $658 for 1943-44; and 459,000 people estimated in the county January 1, 1945, compared with 425,000 on January 1, 1944. These data, summarized by California Taxpayers' association, are for the county alone. Data for the cities, and the school and other districts in the county are not included.

County and other local governments in California are, on the whole, in good financial shape at the beginning of 1945, the Taxpayers' organization said.

The state government, with a general fund cash excess which is expected to reach $60,000,000 by June 30, 1945, and with $239,908,000 already set aside for postwar construction and other obligations, is also in fine financial condition to face the postwar period.

"Comment on the state," the association said, "is made advisedly, for action by the 1945 legislative session, which opened January 8, could 'upset the apple cart,' Passage of legislation radically increasing the demands on the state treasury could guarantee either new and increased state taxes or the state treasury in the red in the postwar period.

"Citizens generally should give close attention to expenditures on all levels of government in California," the Taxpayers' association declared. "They should be on guard against excessive or ill-timed proposals for postwar projects or services. They should question any further expansion of California's social welfare and aid to the needy structure. They should back every suggestion for improvement in government practice that will release men and women for needed war work. They should emphasize individual responsibility, individual saving, and perpetuation of the free enterprise system. They should insist that all legitimate tax reductions be put into effect when the buget and tax programs for the next fiscal year are made."

Appeal Made For 12,000 Hangers For Patients At Camps

An appeal is being made for 12,000 wire coat and pants hangers on behalf of the 2500 patients expected at Mitchell U. S. Army Convalescent hospital at Campo, according to Col. Julia Dowell, commander of the Women's Ambulance and Transport Corps.

Eleven hundred men are expected by February 1 and 2500 by May 1. And as these men are coming direct to Mitchell from overseas they will have nothing upon which to hang their clothes unless the public provides it.

Wooden hangers also are very acceptable providing they have the bar across upon which trousers may be hung.

Ocean Beach residents are asked to take or send hangers to Mabel Jordan at Railway Express Office, 5040 Newport Avenue, Ocean Beach.

Books and Book Gossip—

Speaking of books, I overheard some one say that I would read anything, any time, anywhere, and in any position! But now, I think that's going a little too far! I admit I had my nose in "Forever Amber" at the time!

Edner Ferber has always written about America, and frankly, I think it's the finest theme any American could choose. This time it's Great Son, a novel that takes you to Seattle, the gateway to the Pacific, Northwest. It is a story of the Melendys a family grown rich and ill at ease. I look for this book to be one of the most important novels of the year, and certainly one of the most interesting. Your only regret will be that it is not long enough.
